

WITH AGE COMES KNOWLEDGE

BY MARCY COLE, COMMUNITY LIVING AMBASSADOR, THE NOTTINGHAM

Joining a kickoff tailgate party with 100 friends. Enjoying an A cappella performance. Celebrating Women's History Month with a guest lecture. Learning finance, investments and the stock market.

These are all activities we stereotypically associate with college, but it's a list of activities hosted or planned for residents of Loretto's Nottingham facility – a place where age does not define a limit to learn.

The Nottingham has teamed up with the Syracuse University College of Professional Studies to host Orange Academy on location. Programs are held on-site at the Nottingham facility, provided by Syracuse University Faculty and student groups. Among the first programs held on location are a concert by the SU Otto Tunes A cappella group; a Women's History Month guest lecture by Mary Grace Almandrez, Vice President of Diversity, Inclusion, Equity & Accessibility; and a session on finance, investments and the stock market with Derek Brainard, Accredited Financial Counselor® through the AFCPE® and Professional Studies Instructor. The Nottingham residents will also have access to the Syracuse University online course catalog at a discounted rate.

The partnership is a natural fit for The Nottingham residents -- about 1 in 4 has been involved with Syracuse University in their lifetime. Many of them are former educators. A few of them, like Richard Levy, hold the title of Professor Emeritus. It was the state-of-the-art labs that drew Levy to Syracuse University in the 1960s, despite never hearing of the university prior to being recruited. For 37 years, Levy was an icon in what is now the Department of Biology.

Now, Levy is able to continue his pursuit of education at Loretto through community partnerships and creative and engaging programming.
